

COLLEGE OF LAW

Go

QUICK LINKS ▾

Home | About | Academics | Admissions | Student Life | Faculty | Library | Career Services | Alumni & Giving | Clinical Law

Home » News & Events

News & Events

WVU Innocence Project Helps Morgantown Man Clear His Name

Kristin | December 11th, 2012

From left to right: Third-year Andy Herrick, Client David Lazzell, Third-year Derek Knopp

Morgantown — Every year for two decades, even after his conviction was overturned, David Lazzell was required to place his name on the West Virginia Sex Offender Registry. His name was finally cleared recently with help from the Innocence Project at the West Virginia University College of Law.

"For years the system failed me," said Lazzell. "But justice can be done."

In 1991, Lazzell was convicted of a sexual offense in Louisiana. His conviction was overturned in 2007 after the victim recanted her testimony. In West Virginia, however, Lazzell was required to continue adding his name every year to the official list of the state's sex offenders.

Earlier this year, Lazzell sought legal help from the Innocence Project at WVU College of Law and his case was taken over by student lawyers Derek Knopp and Andy Herrick. Working with officials at the West Virginia Sex Offender Registry, they were able to permanently remove Lazzell's name and photo from the list.

"Mr. Lazzell came to us simply wanting to return his life to some sort of normalcy," said Herrick. "Sometimes it just takes some persistence and cooperation to get legal matters like this sorted out."

The Innocence Project at WVU College of Law teams a professor with third-year law students who are dedicated to post-conviction litigation and policy reform. The Project

*Check here often for news and information regarding the WVU College of Law. For questions or to submit news items please contact Kristin Brumley, Integrated Marketing Specialist.

Recent Articles

Native-American Lawyer to Speak at WVU College of Law

Renowned biologist to discuss climate change solution at WVU College of Law

WVU College of Law gains asylum for Syrian mother and son

WVU Innocence Project Helps Morgantown Man Clear His Name

Energy Center Opens the Discussion on Long-Term Resource Planning by WV Utilities

Chesapeake Energy Makes \$250,000 Gift to WVU College of Law

WVU Law Goes Hollywood

WVU College of Law Wants More Women Lawyers

Professor Titolo Cited by the Sixth Circuit

WVU Sports and Entertainment Law Society hosts National Comedy Theatre fundraiser

Archives

January 2013
December 2012
November 2012
October 2012
September 2012
August 2012
June 2012
May 2012

investigates potential cases in the state and provides free legal representation to individuals with credible claims of innocence. It is one of several law clinics at WVU that serve the public while giving students valuable legal experience.

"I'm happy we were able to have a role in helping Mr. Lazzell clear his name," said Knopp. "Fortunately, we were able to work alongside the people at the Registry to right a wrong that Mr. Lazzell has lived with for a long time."

For more information about the West Virginia Innocence Project or to apply for free legal assistance, visit the WVU College of Law Clinical Law Program webpage or call (304) 293-7249.

- April 2012
- March 2012
- February 2012
- January 2012
- December 2011
- November 2011
- October 2011
- September 2011
- August 2011
- July 2011
- June 2011
- May 2011
- April 2011
- March 2011
- February 2011
- January 2011
- December 2010
- November 2010
- October 2010
- September 2010
- August 2010
- July 2010
- June 2010
- May 2010
- April 2010
- March 2010
- February 2010
- January 2010
- December 2009
- November 2009
- October 2009
- September 2009
- August 2009
- July 2009
- June 2009
- May 2009

